EXCITING RUNORS AFLOAT IN WASHINGTON. a the absence of any legitimate news, the city has a to-day flooded with rumors, none of which were absurd to find believers. Mr. Davis, (Union) of Ky., contended that Congress had no power to enlarge or diminish the qualifications of officer prescribed the frections of his office unless he takes an additional cath prescribed by the constitution.

Mr. Thumell said the constitution prescribed the form of eath for the President; but this act did not apply to the President, but to those persons appointed to the civil, military or naval departments. A clause in the sixth article provides generally that Senators, Representatives and other officers shall be bound by eath to support the constitution, but prescribes no form. The object of this act is to prevent persons engaged in this rebellion from holding office under the government. He never wanted to see a person who had voluntarily taken up arms against the government in either branch of Congress, or holding an office under the government. The bill does not touch those coerced in such person to hold office.

THE NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Without coming to a vote on the bill, on motion of Mr. Presender, the Naval Appropriation bill was taken

Mr. Preserroers, the Naval Appropriation bill was taken up.

A number of amendments were adopted.

Mr. Antrony, (rep.) of R. I., opposed the amendment for the repairs of the Naval School at Newport or Annapolis, as an indirect mode of directing the department to remove the Naval School from Newport. He thought the Senate was not ready to make such disposition of the Naval School on such short notice. He referred to the circumstances of the removal of the School from Annapolis as an additional reason why the Senate should not hastily act in this matter. The Senate should not hastily act in this matter. The Senate should not restore the Naval School where it may be reached in any way by traitors. The great advantages of Newport in harbor, climate, means of communication, &c. seem to point it out as the very place for the Naval Academy.

Mr. Tex Evex, (rep.) of N. J., said that he should oppose the amendment in order to have a commission formed to select a proper place for this school. He thought that Perth Amboy had great advantages for such a school.

thought that Perth Amboy had great advantages for such a school.

Mr. Fosusa, (rep.) of Conn., thought that if such a commission was formed the harbor of New London, Conn., would be found to possess the greatest advantages for the heation of the Naval School.

Mr. Hale, (rep.) of N. H., referred to the letter of the Secretary of the Navy stating that the legal location of the academy was st Annapolis. He thought Newport a bad location, as affording strong temptations to dissipation during the summer season. It was the great resort of fashion and dissipation every summer. It would be unwise, at the present time, to undertake to remove the Naval Academy. Maryland had twice given large majorities at the polis for the Union, and it seems ungrateful to do anything like taking away what advantages she may derive from this academy. He (Mr. Hale) did not want the Naval Academy at Portsmouth, N. H., but all that has been said of Newport, Perth Amboy or New London, if multiplied twice, would not equal the advantages of Portsmouth for the academy.

Mr. KENNEDY, (opp.) of Md., would not attempt to make a speech against a proposition so manifestly unjust as this, it take away this school for sellish or sectional reasons. Objection was made to Annapolis, which was assumed to be the disloyalty of Maryland, and even the conduct of Gov. Hicks. He stood by Gov. Hicks in his attempt to get possession of the State which was wrested from him by a sudden uprising of a mob, and they made a request for a temporary suspension of the his attempt to get possession of the State which was wrested from him by a sudden uprising of a mob, and they made a request for a temporary suspension of the transportation of troops until they could recover the State; and less than ten days after the government acceded to their request these men were fleeing from the city of Baltimore and from the State to join the rebeis, and they were now exites by the laws of this denounced State. He claimed that Maryland was now as loyal, honorable and true to the constitutional obligations as any other state in the Union. He claimed no more fewer, but protested that Maryland should not continually be made a scape goat for the offences of a few men, and indignity heaped upon the State. He was aware that Maryland was a suspected State; but they rested justification on her future history, and he was not going to attempt any vindication of the loyalty of that State. If Maryland is to be regarded as disloyal, and this charge be used to take away a pality advantage arising from this school, in God's name let it go. The people of his State were not to be diverted from the high purposes they svowed again and again, of standing by the constitution as it is and the restoration of the Union as it was. They ask no more than they were willing to accede to others.

Mr. Arrisory disclaimed making any charge against

Mr. Kennen the senior class in the Naval Academy, in favor of a return to Annapolis.

Mr. Gemes, (rep.) of lows, thought this was really a question whether we would continue a Naval Academy at all. We had all the buildings, library, &c., at Annapolis.

He was not willing to, be driven from there by the rebels, nor was he willing to punish loyal men of Maryland by taking away this school; and, in fact, one great reason for the removal of the school was because General Butler went there and wanted a place for accommodations, and it was thought the school might be accommodated temporarily at Fort Adams.

Mr. Class, (rep.) of N. H., said be should vote to restore this school, aftar Maryland had gone through the struggle and shown herself loyal. He was not going to attempt to punish her by taking away this school. He wanted to restore things in the border States as they were, and restore all the States, and he was utterly opposed to making them Territories, or anything of that sort. He wanted to restore all the States and punish individual traitors, so that rebellion would never again raise its head in this country.

Mr. Tarmant, (rep.) of ill., wanted to know if the effect of this amendment was to direct the immediate restoration of the academy to Annapolis?

Mr. Hate said it involved nothing of the sort. It simply appropriated $25,000 for the repair of the buildings at Annapolis.

SECRETARY CHANE TO THADDEUS STRVENS.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 7, 1862.

SIR—The act of July 17, 1861, authorized the issue of $50,000.000 in United States notes, payable on demand, and receivable for customs. This authority was enlarged under the act of February 12, 1862, by the addition of $10,000.000—making $60,000.000 in all.

The acts of February 25 and March 17, 1862, authorized temporary deposits in the Treasury at rates of interest not exceeding five per cent, nor for a greater aggregate sum than $50,000,000. The act of February 25, 1862, buthorized the issue of $150,000,000 in United States notes, provided, however, that the demand notes issued under former acts should be retired and cancelled as raj killy as practicable, and that the aggregate of such notes and of the United States notes to be issued under this act should at no time exceed $150,000,000. All the notes to be issued were made a legal tgoder, but none, except the demand notes, were made receivable for customs.

intion, being held at a premium in consequence of their receivability for customs, of from three-quarters to one-quarter per cent, and about $3,509,000 are held in the Treasury of refrequentation.

The whole issue of $60,000,000 in demand noise may thus be regarded as practically withdrawn from circulation. This withdrawal leaves only the issue of $50,000,000,000 of United States notes not receivable for customs, increased gradually by the substitution of these noises for the demand notes cancelled, from which conversion into bonds redseemable after five years, and payable in twenty years, called for convenience, five-twenties, can be expected to be made.

The limit of temporary deposits is now reached, and nothing further can be expected from that source, for so long as the limit shall be maintained current receipts of such deposits can only be equal to the payments. It is, therefore, upon the conversion of United States notes into five-twenties, now practically limited to the ninety million of legal tender notes, and upon receipts from customs, that the Treasury must depend, under existing legislation, for means to meet current expenditures.

Nosafe reliance can be placed on conversions, so-far as experience has afforded any grounds of estimate for more than $150,000 dairy, and the daily average revenue sources, therefore, cannot be estimated at more than $350,000—may very possibly fallabort of that sum—while the average daily expenditures cannot be estimated at less than one milion, and will probably, unless very considerable retrenelments are made, exceed that sum.

I therefore prepose the removal of the restriction upon temporary deposits. The plan of receiving them has worked well, and is likely to continue to work well in future. The rate of interest, limited to five per cent by law, has been reduced to four by my direction; and it is not proposed to increase it unless some exigency shall make the increase necessary.

The amount of deposits at four per cent now exceeds nine millions, and will become stea former.

It may indeed become practicable to reduce the rate of interest even below four per cent with advantage. Whatever the rate allowed, the average excess of deposits above reimbursements will constitute a loan to the government at that rate. In order to retain the average excess at its maximum, it may be well to provide by law that of the United States notes hereafter authorized.

excess at its maximum, it may be well to provide by law, that of the United States notes hereafter authorized to be issued there shell be always reserved in the Treasury, or from issue, an amount not less than one-third the amount deposited.

Such a provision would make the Treasury the best of savings banks, and by its guaranty of prompt payment under all circumstances insure the highest confidence and augment to its maximum the flow of deposite. I estimate the amount of loan likely to be made to the government at four per cent or loss in this form at not less than $20,000,000 in addition to the $50,000,000 aircedy deposited.

I propose also that authority be given to the Secretary of the Treasury to issue $150,000,000 in United States notes, in addition to the issue aircady authorized, and that these be made a legal tender for debts, except interest on loans, and receivable in payment of all loans to the United States for all government dues, except duties on imports and interest.

If this authority be given, the proposed reserve of an amount—say $34,000,000—not less than one third the temporary deposits, and the replacement of that portion of the $60,000,000 of demand notes—say $56,000,000—now practically withdrawn from circulation and held for payment of customs, will require for the present at least say $50,500,000 of the proposed additional issue, leaving, as an actual present addition to the resources of the government, only $59,500,000.

This amount, however, gradually increased as it will be by the retirement of the demand notes, will be paid in for public dues, and the replacement of them by other United States notes, will probably suffice for all demands which cannot be met from conversions and from customs.

be by the retirement of the demand notes, will be paid in for public dues, and the replacement of them by other United States notes, will probably suffice for all demands which cannot be met from conversions and from customs.

If Congress shall see fit to authorize the additional emission proposed, it seems highly expedient that such part as the public convenience shall require be issued in denominations less than $5.

I am aware of the general objections to the issue of notes under $5, and concede their cogency. Indeed, under ordinary circumstances, they are unanswerable, but, in the existing circumstances, they are unanswerable, but, in the existing circumstances, they are unanswerable, but, in the expenditures of a context for national existence, and the expenditures of a context for national existence, and the shall be provided in the expenditures of a context for national existence, and the shall be removed the wants of the country will absorb a circulation of $25,000,000, and perhaps more. The interest on this circulation, say $1,500,000 a year, will be saved to the taxpayers.

Payments to public creditors, and especially to soldiers, now require large amounts of coin to satisfy fractional demands less than $5. Great inconveniences in payment of the troops are thus occasioned. With every effort on the part of the Treasury to provide the necessary amount of coin it is found impracticable always to satisfy their demands:

When the amount required is furnished, the temptation to disbursing officers to exchange it for any small bank notes that the soldiers er the public creditors will take is too great to be always resisted. And even when the coin reaches the creditors it is seldom held, but passes, in general, immediately into the hands of sutlers and others, and disappears at once from circulation. The inconveniences, therefore, to the government and creditors, from the absence of United States notes of small denominations in notes similar to denominations in notes in notes similar to denominations in notes

I propose further, to make arrangements for the negeo-sary engraving and other work, for the printing and pre-paration for the issue of these notes in the Treas, ry Le-partment at Washington. I am led to believe the a vory considerable reduction of expense can be thus, affected. The prospect, in my judgment, certainly warrants the trial.

With these objects I have prepared a bill which I propose to submit to the consideration of the committee.
